MILTON MERCURY.

We have received the first number of the journal of the above name published by Mr. J. V. Thaxton, Editor and proprietor. It is Democratic in principle, and gives promise of usefulness, and we welcome it as a valuable recruit.

We acknowledge the receipt of the Albany Argus Almanac for 1876. It is a complete political and financial annual and will be found invaluable during the current year of conflict. The Argus itself has survived many a hard conflict. It was once a power in the land to shape Presidential destiny. It is still an able journal, but without its former national influence.

The dispatches say that one vote is lost against Pinchback. The gray-headed Senator, Christianity is gotten out of the way with the gift of a pretty young wife from one of the Departments. Oh! Christianity, why not let the child grow up before you married her, and stay in your seat to vote against Pinchback.

THE AMERICAN FARMER for February, is promptly issued and will be found of unusual value, containing as it does numerous papers suitable to the season and the times.

The correspondents of the Farmer are very numerous and able, and from all the States from Pennsylvania to Mississippi; and every subject connected with agriculture in all its branches receives full attention. Published monthly by Samuel Sands & Co., Baltimore, Maryland, at $1.50 per year; or 5 copies for $5.00. Specimens may be had on application.

Another one of those fearful panics and dreadful loss of life occurred at Cincinnati on Saturday night during a performance in an Opera House where a false alarm of fire was sounded and the terrified audience, thousands in number, rushed pell mell to the only exit. Hundreds were hurt, and ten were taken out of the mass of human victims, dead. This is but a repetition of the fearful scene of last Spring where a church was burned and upwards of a hundred persons perished, because they could not get out of the building, except by doors, and those few in number, opening on the inside. We urged then a revolution in this matter that an audience might feel safe. There is no audience that is exempt from these panics. A mischievous boy in the gallery, as in the Cincinnati case, may excite in a second to the wildest and most maddening terror. All control is lost, and people follow the blind instinct of self preservation, the strongest tramping down without regard the weak and delicate.

But each community will buy its own experience.

The specie resumption problem is one set out to non-plus both parties, and it is, therefore, most absurd that it should be the occasion of a division in the Democratic ranks. The idea of resumption is claimed by the Republican party as its peculiar possession. But its legislation on financial matters, and the profuse extravagance generated by its policy, makes sudden resumption impossible. With more reason the Democratic party might claim resumption as its policy; because it really reverences specie as honest money. Yet a large proportion of that party sees in hasty resumption nothing but distress and ruin for the country. If the principle will be accepted that resumption is the ultimate aim of all new financial measures, then steps can be taken to reach it naturally and gradually. But it cannot be forced upon the country by one view or its opposite taken as a test of party fidelity.

Mr. Bristol, the Secretary of the Treasury, Republican authority, and a good party man, except in his hostility to dishonesty, says that the specie resumption act as it now stands is not practicable. The New York Board of Trade has submitted to the Senate of the United States a memorial demonstrating the expediency of attempting the resumption of specie payments before the requisite conditions were ripe. These are two high authorities, and they will tend to reconcile differing and doubting Democrats to a policy of delay and deliberation without involving in dissension their principles or practices. And on this question the Republicans have no advantage. With all their clamor for honest money they are estopped by the effects of their own acts from giving it to the country except by the gradual operation of natural laws—one of which is the restoration of confidence, which Republican management has so terribly shattered.

A COLORED MAGISTRATE COMES TO GRIEF.

W. H. Moore, member of the Legislature from New Hanover, and one of the Magistrates of the county was, as we noticed some weeks ago, tried at the late term of the Superior Court for that county for the heinous outrage of compelling an accused person, a white man, to touch the corpse of a murdered man, with the expectation by that ordeal to draw forth a proof of guilt, such an ordeal being relied upon in the Fetish ritual in which Moore is no doubt more proficient than in the practices of Christianity. Moore has been found guilty of the outrage under the charge of Assault and Battery, and sentenced to a fine of $50, and imprisonment for one year.

A new trial was asked for upon the ground of failure of the Judge to instruct the jury on certain points of law to which his attention had been called. The decision of his Honor was postponed until the next term of the Court and the sentence is in abeyance until then.

The clemency of the Court was craved on the ground of ignorance and the influence of superstition. All of which might be allowed in the humble negro, content to plod at the hoe-handle and indulging in his obscurity all the dark practices and beliefs of his progenitors. But Mr. Bill Moore aspired to shine; to lead his race; to show the white people what the negro could do if he had the opportunity. He went to the Legislature, and helped to make laws for the government of the whites. He was made a Magistrate, and he put those laws into practice with his own interpretation of them. Is ignorance an excuse for him who presumes to execute grave, public trusts? But radicalism has sown Bill Moore's broad cast all over the South.

THE SPENCER CASE.

With the party loyalty of the Republicans, the Democrats have nothing to do. Their standard of moral rectitude is unknown to us. What apparently would be repugnant to every principle of justice and honesty, with that party at large is set up as a rule of action, and as a usual thing, it has been banded together, in unbroken phalanx, to attain the great object of its existence—power, and party ascendancy—without reference to means. When, therefore, we see a rebellion in the ranks of this party against its ordinary practices, we may set it down as something so outrageously nefarious that it has turned the stomachs of those not over delicate in past experience in their scruples. The Spencer case is one in point. Spencer has a seat in the United States procured, according to the evidence submitted to the committee of the Alabama Legislature, by open bribery, by unscrupulous use of the powers of the government, and by foul practices upon the persons of individuals. But he is defended in his disgraced position by his party friends in the Senate, determined to permit no diminution of party strength in that body, even if certain members of it are unfit associates for honest men; and the administration organs pronounce the report of the Alabama Legislature ex-parte and unworthy to be received, though the evidence is based mainly on Republican authority. Now, a committee of Republicans, consisting of some of the most prominent names in Alabama, are sent to Washington to urge the rejection of Spencer. This may be a spasmodic attack of virtue such as has seized upon Chamberlain in S. Carolina. It may be the spleen of disappointed men.

ent out of their share of honors and profits. In the one case it concerns all the changes made by the Democrats in the Republican party, especially in the case of the resumption of power will thoroughly deprave and corrupt the whole country. In the other case, it shows the disruption of the party, brought about by that inevitable quarrel over the spoils which always takes place when thieves feed strong enough to defy the law.

"When rogues fall out, honest men will get their due."

Travel to the western part of the State is now much more pleasant than by the old schedule of the railway lines. Our leaves Raleigh about 11 a. m., and dining at Company Shops, reaches Salisbury in good time for supper. After a night's rest, the cars of the Western road leave at five in the morning, and connecting with the stage, the traveler may go on to Asheville the same day. In about a fortnight this will be done at a much earlier hour and with more comfort, so that the traveler will run Main road, avoiding the worst three miles of the present stage route. Col. Tate informs us that it is probable that all the tunnels will be finished before January next, and a new era will dawn for that road, and indeed the prosperity of the whole west, beyond the Ridge.

Asheville is improving, and remains well filled with Northern winter tourists, and a new era will dawn for that road, and indeed the prosperity of the whole west, beyond the Ridge.

The "Land of the Sky" will doubtless play their part in directing to North Carolina in the coming summer many lovers of the picturesque and seekers of health. Really her State owes this gift to a small debt of gratitude.

We have had a week of snow and rain, ice and mud, and mountain blizzards, so intermixed as to render sight-seeing out of the question, but I may justly say, from the glimpses I have had of the scenery, that Asheville has begun steadily to improve. The town authorities have been for some time at work on the streets, curbing and filling up sidewalks and grading. The wide streets are quite popular with the citizens, and the troops are reported as very orderly and quiet.

The court-house, a substantial granite building, has recently received a new roof, and the fence which encloses the square on which it stands will shortly be replaced by a neat and substantial new one. There is also some probability of the removal of the shops of the Western Railroad from Salisbury to Morganton, and we are informed that a subscription by the citizens has been proposed to aid in securing that object.

Another mark of returning prosperity to this ancient town is the establishment of the Burke Blade by Captain Avery, late of the Charlotte Observer, and well known throughout the State. The first issue will be made on Thursday next, 10th inst., but the regular day of publication will be Tuesday. From Burke's review of the adjacent counties were cut out such as McDowell, Mitchell, Yancey and part of Caldwell, with perhaps others, and many of their people yet look with peculiar interest to this, the centre of the western region, where their fathers were court and were sentenced in olden times. It is not unreasonable to suppose that the influence of a good paper of this kind would be extensive.

The work of the Western Infirmary is progressing steadily, but not very rapidly, at this season. There is no need for such hurry as would slight any portion of the work, and the Commission only had at its disposal for last year and the present seventy-five thousand dollars in all, which will be expended before the next meeting of the Legislature. The grading for the site has been completed some time ago, and the cellars are now three-fourths finished. The extent of this work will be better appreciated when it is understood that twelve thousand cubic yards of earth have been removed thus far, in the cellar work. Part of the lumber has been delivered for the flooring joists, and is pronounced by the builder to be of very fine quality. It is all heart and was taken from the best timber in the vicinity.

It is gratifying to know that the recent failure of the Tredgar Company in Richmond, Va., will not affect the contract for the delivery of the pipe to supply water to the Asylum. The contract has been renewed by the Asylum, and the delivery is now in progress. This is probably the most favorable contract for such a supply of iron ever made in the South. The pipe is six inches in diameter, weighs twenty-eight pounds to the foot, and are carefully tested by hydraulic pressure to sustain three hundred pounds' pressure to the square inch. Each delivery of pipe is to be accompanied by the certificate of this test, as applied by a competent engineer.

During the past month the final section of the Water Works have been made by Dr. Nerues Mendenhall, Superintendent Engineer, assisted by Major Roger Atkinson and Mr. William Walton. By the route finally adopted, the cost of a little more of cutting, Dr. Mendenhall has saved eleven hundred feet of distance. The contract for hauling the pipe and delivering along the line was awarded to Capt. Patterson at the rate of $1.75 per ton, the average distance from the railroad being two miles and a half, with loading and unloading, and placing in a proper position in readiness for laying.

No bids for laying brick were opened. There are a large number in the hands of the Commission, but it was determined to defer the opening until the 14th inst. at Greensboro, on account of reasons satisfactory to all parties.

The great beauty of the location was more than ever apparent, in view of the mountains covered with snow, and exhibiting infinite variety from the dark Livinville to the clear sparkling white of the far away Yellow mountain on the Tennessee line.

The Commission is fortunate in securing the services of the Master Builder, James Walker, of Williamsburg, Va., who has been in the city for some time, and the high regard of the most eminent citizens of this section, he comes to the work resolved to identify his honorable reputation with success. Every brick will be inspected by him, every line examined with his eye, and the public may be satisfied that no step will be taken in this important work without the deliberate sanction of the interests of the State. It can be made, as in the light of experience it ought to be made, a model institution for the South.

PERSONAL AND POLITICAL.

Congressman H. Y. Riddle, the new Representative from the IVth Tennessee District, has given to the Treasury of his State the amount of back salary due him owing to the death of his predecessor, $764 10.

We are requested to announce that in the absence of Rev. Dr. Thomas from the city, the pulpit of the Christian Church will be occupied this evening by Rev. C. T. Bailey, of Raleigh, N. C.

Hon. John Goode, through a dispatch received by M. T. Cooke, Esq., of Raleigh, has been notified of the condition of Mr. Goode's health. His host of friends will receive the intelligence with joy.

A meeting of the clergy of all denominations will be held at 12 o'clock to-day at the hall of the Young Men's Christian Association for the purpose of taking steps to cause the Legislature to repeal the charter of the Southern Widows' and Orphans' Lottery Association.—Richmond Dispatch.

Congressman Piper of California, said to own 200 acres, within the city limits of San Francisco. He is of pure Swedish descent, was a carpenter by trade, and caught the California fever by reading a speech of Daniel Webster in which the future Senator was described in glowing terms.

Macaulay could repeat all Demosthenes by heart, all Milton, a great part of the Bible in English and the New Testament in Greek. He took great delight in the Bible, and there were few better scholars than he. And yet he could not throw the snow off a side-walk without putting his foot in it.—Herald.

Hon. John Elwyn, of New Hampshire, just dead at the age of seventy-three years, was wealthy and a great scholar. He would never ride in a stage coach, and from Portsmouth to Philadelphia and once returned the whole distance on foot to get a shirt he had forgotten. It is unnecessary to say that he was a democrat.—Herald.

Ex-President Thomas Hill of Harvard College approves of Mr. Hayes. The speaker of the House for the Portland Press: "Every political error may be forgiven even if it has proceeded so far as to lead to overt treason and armed rebellion. But if we forget the elements of malignancy, cruel murders, the forgiveness ought certainly to be limited; it ought not to restore the offender to our full confidence, nor to his full privileges."

A bronze statue of Witherspoon, a former President of Princeton College and one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence, has been completed in Philadelphia, and will be placed in Fairmount Park some time next summer. The statue is about eight feet high, and is 13 feet high. The figure stands erect, the right arm slightly extended, and the left bent against the breast and holding a manuscript. The design of the drapery is to represent the subject both in his clerical and civilian character. The coat and waistcoat are of the continental cut, and from the shoulders hangs the Geneva gown, lined with velvet, and fastened by a cord and tassels. The features are strongly marked and are expressive of great force of character.

The lukewarmness toward Gov. Hayes as a Presidential candidate which has been evident in the Cincinnati Gazette office seems to be increasing. Here is the latest indication: "There are other States besides Ohio to be carried. We do not doubt that the electoral vote of Ohio would be given to Cleveland. But if any other Republican of National reputation and good character who took on no heavy weights, who should receive the nomination. And certainly we would not do so unless policy led us to reflections on other prominent Republicans in order to forward preferences for Hayes, for this would provoke retaliation and set up a chain of evils and conflicts which would be mutually destructive to the aspirants as well as damaging to the party."

Real Editors and the Other Kind.

The Boston Post, in an article concerning the crowd of Indiana editors recently in Washington, says: "Editors are not a new thing. They have been in the world since the first printing press was invented. When they do they necessarily part with their profession. In point of fact the real journalist, or editor as some insist, is personally acquainted with the lives of the living individuals who wield an equal amount of influence or perform an equal amount of work. The preacher appears weekly to the public in the pulpit, the physician visits his patients daily and talks with them; the lawyer harangues juries and pleads with judges; the journalist alone is a secret and popularly unknown. He is content to see the silent but effective operation of his influence. It is his journal that speaks for him. He would as soon think of prancing about the country and exhibiting himself to the public in different cities as he would of standing at the corners and hawking his own sheet. He would much sooner perform under Barnum at the Centennial, than perch himself in the gallery of the United States Senate for exhibition. He is not in the habit of wearing a chalked hat, sleeping in free beds at hotels, or being surrounded by a crowd of adoring followers. He is content to join a traveling troupe of men with flying hair or young women with flowing feathers. His life is one of work, and not of excursions. When he is forth to his office, he is fresh and back in the sunshine of the outer world, no one is a stranger stranger than he, and the last subject upon which he is to talk about is a newspaper. This troupe of Hoosier editors is a party that has been organized to see the country and feast on its products without having to expend a dollar."
